

2018 Community Leader Media Award

Warren T. Colville

Warren is the President & Publisher of The Buffalo News, a major newspaper that reaches 70% of the population in 7 counties and serves two major metropolitan areas. Because of Warren's dedication to covering the people of this area, there is a sense of connectedness that comes from reading the Buffalo News; one that is uniquely WNY in nature written for us and by us.

Warren, who came to Buffalo in 1987, brought with him a reputation for, and commitment to, repaying the community for its support. He knows how important the relationship is between the paper and its reader, and he actively seeks out ways for the News to engage others. He personally steers the annual Buffalo News Kids Day, News Neediest Fund, and Books for Kids Campaign, all of which immeasurably benefit the children and families of WNY. Warren also serves on the Boards of the Buffalo Niagara Partnership, The Business Council of NYS, The Darwin Martin House, and is a past board member for Shea's, Hilbert College, The Better Business Bureau, and the Buffalo Urban League.

For his service in keeping us so well informed, and for his work to strengthen the bonds between the Buffalo News and the people of our region, the NFJC is proud to present Warren T. Colville with the 2018 Community Leader Award in Media.
